

The Ultimate Consumer

T'is the ultimate consumer,
Said the general with a smirk.
It fuels the gross economy,
And puts us all to work.

Its appetite is endless
For the products we produce;
And the lovely thing about it
Is there's no constructive use.

Upon receipt it's obsolete,
When used: blown to perdition!
Which simply means, when all is done,
A further requisition.

T'is the most efficient market
That mankind has ever seen:
With universal customers
And debt that's quite obscene.

Yes, war!

The ultimate consumer,
Said the general with a sigh.
If only we could work it where
The customers don't die...